P R E F A C E.

REFERRING for a general account of the Malayan language and of the people by whom it is spoken, to what is contained in the Introduction to the Grammar, it will be sufficient in this place to explain the principles on which this Dictionary is constructed, and to give such instructions as may facilitate its use.

The work consists of two parts: the first comprising the Malayan words in their proper character, arranged according to the order of the alphabet employed by the natives in their writings, which they have borrowed from the Arabians and modified to suit the sounds peculiar to their own language. These words, for the accommodation of persons who are commencing their studies, as well as of those whose object it is to acquire only a practical knowledge of the tongue for the purposes of business, are given also in European characters, upon a regular and consistent plan of orthography, and are followed by their corresponding terms in English with as much precision as the structure of the two languages and modes of thinking of the two people will admit. But in order to afford the learner an opportunity of judging for himself how far this agreement is complete, or what latitude of interpretation is to be allowed, examples of phrases and sentences adapted to the different meanings of the words, are annexed to each, as these have occurred in the writings of the natives.

The second part contains the English words in alphabetical order, with their differences of signification explained, where necessary, by others nearly synonymous, together with the corresponding Malayan terms, those in general being placed first which are in the most current use, most directly apply to the English, and are the most purely Malayan. It must at the same time be understood that in many instances it is impossible to find terms precisely corresponding, and consequently that those given are only the nearest approximations.

Although this English and Malayan part will be found the most useful by those who mean to acquire the language for colloquial purposes (and who are likely to be the most numerous class), the former is the essential portion of the work, in which it has been my endeavour to comprise all the knowledge of the language that could be derived either from the labours of my predecessors or from my own experience and study. In this part only the examples have been introduced, and to it the learner, who wants more copious or precise information than he can obtain from what may be considered as little other than a vocabulary, must take the trouble of referring. To have pursued a different plan would not only have occasioned unnecessary repetitions, but it must also be obvious that as the Dictionary is intended for the use of the European who wishes to become master of the idioms and phraseology of the Malayan, rather than to convey a knowledge of English idioms to the Malay, it is of much more consequence that an arrangement should be followed which admits of the Malayan examples being genuine quotations, and enables the native as it were to speak for himself, than to produce the purest English sentences, which must necessarily be rendered in Malayan phrases of my own composition. These indeed might be substantially correct, but they would be deficient in point of authority, and might frequently want that idiomatic turn of expression which in any language is rarely acquired by a foreigner, or if attempted has too often an air of affectation.

affectation. Thus it will be perceived by persons who have a competent knowledge of any oriental language, how mawkish and uncouth the versions of the ordinary style of our own appear in the dialogues commonly annexed to grammatical works.

From a Dictionary alone no scholar can ever expect to acquire the faculty of speaking or writing a language with ease and correctness, but so simple is the constructure of the Malayan that by the aid of this or any accurate vocabulary he may very soon be enabled to express himself with sufficient propriety to be intelligible for the ordinary purposes of speech, and with this foundation he must gradually improve himself by conversation with natives of the country (if his situation admits of it) or with others who have acquired a fluency in the tongue. It is not, however, with a view to the attainment of such an object only that the present work has been undertaken. My wish has been, to facilitate the labours of those who, not regarding the Malayan as merely an oral language, are desirous of studying its literature, and rendering themselves qualified to read and translate, not only letters on commercial and political business, but also compositions of a higher description, both in prose and verse, which, whatever their intrinsic merit may be, are certainly amusing at the least. Nor are we to suppose them destitute of instruction and use, as several compilations of historical annals as well as codes of law are known to exist, and others may be discovered when extensive collections shall have been formed by intelligent and well instructed persons; to the effecting of which the present period, when the English influence is unbounded throughout the eastern world, is peculiarly favourable.

In order to render the Dictionary as conducive as possible to the advancement of this kind of study, which in comparison with the other may be considered as classical, the examples have been selected with great attention from the best manuscripts in my possession, and in general

ral will be found most numerous where some ambiguity or obscurity in the sense of the word has made it necessary to throw as much light upon it as could be obtained. If their frequency should be thought superfluous by those who consult the work (though with the zealous student I do not feel that I run any risk of censure on this account) they may be inclined, notwithstanding, to give me credit for the tendency of these quotations to convey a faithful picture of the modes of thinking of a people who have so little in common with ourselves; a preference in the selection being always given to those passages which, at the same time, that they serve to explain the word, furnish a representation of some peculiarity of manners, mark the extent of acquirements, or express some ideas on the subjects of their modern religion and ancient mythology. . . |

As a great proportion of the words employed in this, as well as in all other languages, consists of derivatives, that is, of words derived or formed from more simple or radical words, and it must always be of importance to the learner to be able at once to distinguish the root from the particles prefixed or annexed, I have made an invariable rule of separating them, as well as the particles from each other, by hyphens, as in the word be-per-istrī-kan for بھراستریکن “to provide (a son) with a wife,” where استری istrī is the radical, and the other syllables are only particles, whose use must be learned from the Grammar. This, it is obvious, could only be resorted to in the English, and not in the Malayan spelling of the words.

Words evidently borrowed from the Arabic or Persian are marked with the letters AR. or PERS., as are those from the Sanskrit or Hindu dialects with the letters HIND., to which Mr. Wilkins has kindly taken the trouble of adding the original, in the nūgri character, where the words appeared to flow from a pure source. These latter it must here be understood (as in another place will be fully explained) are so much more intimately blended than the former with the Malayan language, that their their foreign origin is not, in these days, suspected by the natives, whilst the Arabic terms, on the contrary, (with a few exceptions) are known to be extrinsic, and seldom employed but in treating of religious and legal subjects. Still it is necessary that those which are most likely to recur should have a place in the Dictionary; and amongst the variety of significations attributed to almost every word in the Arabic language, it may not be useless to the orientalist to know the particular sense in which they are accepted by the Malays. A few Portuguese and other European words that have found their way into the vulgar dialect, have in like manner their respective marks.

With regard to the mode of orthography adopted in expressing the words of the language in our characters, two considerations present themselves: the one, that of conveying as nearly as possible their true sound; and the other, of paying the requisite attention to the powers of the several letters made use of in the original. The system pursued by the Dutch linguists in their excellent version of the Bible and other publications, was that of representing each Malayan character by a corresponding Roman letter, and where the alphabet was found inadequate, of introducing a modified or imitative character to supply the defect. This mode has the strong recommendation of being precise, and as supplying a substitute for the original is unexceptionable, but to the person whose object is to learn an oral language it is unsatisfactory, because those letters (as in our own) do not always express the sound which custom has given to the words, and to those who can read the original it is of no particular advantage.

The English compilers of vocabularies have on the other hand, without regard to the original orthography, endeavoured to express the sounds (as navigators commit to writing the languages of newly discovered islands) by such accidental combinations of letters as seemed best adapted to each individual word, without consistency or uniformity, the same sound, sound, in different words, being represented by different letters, and the same letters being employed with different powers. It has been my design to avoid a pertinacious adherence to either mode. I have followed as closely the literal orthography of the original as could be done consistently with a fair expression of the sound, and where these could not be reconciled I have given a preference to the latter consideration, because it appeared of more importance that the word should be rightly pronounced by those who cannot read the Malayan character, than that the more learned scholar should be gratified by a literal accuracy to him not absolutely necessary. Frequently indeed I have been induced to repeat the spelling with some variation in order to convey a juster idea of the pronunciation.

Although the general uniformity of the language as spoken in the Peninsula, and throughout the numerous islands of this extensive Archipelago, is remarkable, yet certain differences of dialect prevail, affecting especially the pronunciation of the vowels, which in some parts is much more open than in others. To reconcile these in a Dictionary is nearly impossible, and the only practicable course to pursue is to adopt that dialect whose use is warranted by the best authorities, and which is known to prevail in countries where the language has been the most cultivated. In the southern part of the coast of Sumatra, where the principal English establishment is situated, and where I acquired my first knowledge of Malayan, the dialect spoken appears to have received a tincture from the Javanese, under the influence of the government of Bantam, to which in old times it was tributary, and could not therefore be assumed as the standard. To the kingdom of Menangkabau we might be justified in looking for the language in its original purity, as the native writers agree in stating that the first Malayan emigrations proceeded from thence (for the details of which see the History of Sumatra); but as it cannot be maintained, with the imperfect knowledge we possess of its ancient consequence, that literature was there cultivated cultivated in an equal degree to what we know it to have been at Malacca and Johor, it becomes certainly more proper to consider the dialect prevailing in these kingdoms, and which is common also to Kedah, Perak, Tranġgānū, and the neighbouring islands, as the criterion of pronunciation. In several instances, however, and especially where it has been doubtful to which a preference was due, the words have been given as variously pronounced. But the subject of dialects being treated of in the Grammar, it is unnecessary to say more respecting them in this place, than to caution persons who have been accustomed to use the language in countries remote from what is considered as its purest seat, against forming an imperfect judgment on the propriety of what has been here deliberately adopted. Independently also of dialect or the peculiar manner of pronouncing certain words, it may be useful to observe, that a considerable proportion of the words themselves occurring in the Dictionary will not be familiar, nor even at all known to many who have long resided in Malayan countries and been in the habits of intercourse with the natives; the style or idiom which they may have learned to speak with fluency, and which effectually answers the purposes of their business, being very different from that of books or even of conversation amongst the superior class of Malays; although by no means a distinct language. A similar refinement or departure from the vulgar phraseology prevails more or less in all countries, and may be exemplified by the use of our words “repose” for “sleep,” “repast” for “meal,” or “consternation” for “fright;” nor must the inhabitants of a bazat be expected to employ more polished phrases than persons of the same description in other parts of the world. It generally happens also that Europeans in India acquire from each other in the first instance, rather than from the natives, their knowledge of the language; by which means the imperfections of expression are propagated, and the difficulties of correcting them are increased by the proneness of servants and other dependant dependant connexions to conform to the idiom of their masters, in order that they may be the more readily understood. . . .

Instead of distinguishing the words, in the usual manner of Dictionaries, by abbreviations denoting the parts of speech to which they severally belong, it has been found more convenient to ascertain their particular signification by equivalent terms. In Malay as in English, a multitude of primitive words are at once noun and verb (as “love”), substantive and adjective (as “white”), adverb and preposition (as “between”), adjective and adverb (as “daily”), and their value in construction depends for the most part on their position in the sentence. An attempt therefore to discriminate too nicely by referring each of the corresponding terms to its proper class, would be liable to produce more confusion than utility. Beside this it must be observed, that in words borrowed from the Arabic little attention is paid to the part of speech to which they belong in the original, and even the plurals of nouns are employed in the singular number; as Sir William Jones has remarked in his Grammar, to be the practice of the Persians.

In adapting our characters to the sounds of Malayan words, arbitrary marks I have as much as possible avoided, being fully aware, from my own experience, that they are scarcely ever recollected by the reader. The common prosodial mark for a long vowel has been resorted to, and its absence implies that the vowel is short. . To represent an accented syllable, which at the same time is not long (as in besár, betúl) I have made use of the acute accent, and the letter ain which occasionally stands in the place of all the vowels, I have denoted by a grave accent, to distinguish it from the same vowel sound produced in the ordinary way. This I admit to be entirely arbitrary, but I thought it better than to follow the example of some eminent orientalists who, on account of its peculiar nature, have introduced the Arabic character itself amongst the letters of the European alphabet. . . .

The

The powers given to these letters by the different nations who have adopted the Roman system of orthography are so various and inconsistent, that without considerable innovation it would be impossible to form an alphabetic scheme equally applicable to the language of each and intelligible to all. The progress of knowledge is indeed impeded when the elements of instruction must first become the object of study. Yet still it may be thought allowable in a work that aims at being noticed by the learned of more than one country, and is from its nature not readily susceptible of translation, to qualify in a certain degree the most striking peculiarities of our national alphabet, and to venture upon slight modifications, which, at the same time that they will render the pronunciation more intelligible to foreigners, are not likely to occasion any difficulty to our own countrymen, and have already (as to their general principles) received the sanction of those who approve of the orthography of Richardson's Persian and Arabic Dictionary and Jones's Persian Grammar.

Of the English alphabet the consonants appear to be at least as well adapted as those of any other European language (all being more or less inadequate) to represent the sounds of oriental words, and to possess some peculiar advantages in respect to the pronunciation of our j ج, ch چ, and th ث, which, it is well known, are either more operosely or less perfectly imitated in the orthography of other nations. In gutturals it is inferior to the other teutonic dialects, and its vowels are defective both in variety and precision, the same character being employed to denote utterances quite dissimilar, as o in the words "bony, body, bosom;" different characters to express the same sound, as ee in "been," ie in "mien," ei in "receive," ea in "leave;" simple characters to express diphthongs, as the long i in "mine," and long u in "mute;" and double letters to express simple vowel sounds, as oo in "boot," which is the Italian u, and ee in "see," which is the Italian i.

PREFACE.

To render it applicable therefore to the purposes of a Dictionary in which foreign characters are to be represented by English letters, it becomes necessary to simplify the system of vowels, to make choice of such as are best suited to the several well defined vocal sounds, and when so ascertained, to employ them uniformly and consistently. With what degree of success the attempt has been made in the present work, may be judged of from the following specification of the powers assigned to each of the letters of our alphabet, beginning with the vowels. Of their insufficiency I am very sensible, but with the materials in my hands, and without employing arbitrary signs, I have not been able, after much attention, to form any arrangement more perfect. For what regards the Malayan alphabet, the learner is referred to the Grammar.

OF VOWELS.

ā is generally to be sounded full, as in the Italian, German, and other languages of the continent of Europe, and as in the English words “want, ball, call;” but in many words the pronunciation is not broader than in “harm, farm, barn.” It represents the ulif quiescent of the Malayan alphabet.

a or ă, as in “man, stand, parish,” representing the fat-hah or first supplementary vowel. Before the nasal ñg it is sounded nearly as full as if written with ā; but it is not under any circumstance to be pronounced as in the words “paper, nation, fate,” where it usurps the province of the second vowel in every other language that employs the Roman alphabet. It is by far the most common short vowel-sound of Malayan words, as the ū seems to be of the Hindustani and the dialect of Persian spoken in India.

e or ě is pronounced as in “bet, lend, seven,” and likewise represents the fat-hah. The long sound of this vowel in the words “be, me, she, scene,” and in the first syllable of “even,” is that of the third vowel in all other European languages.

i, as the Italian long i, or as the English ee in “been, seen, tree, green,” and e in “he, she, be;” standing for the Malayan ي quiescent. The long sound of i in “wine, fine, idle, high” is not that of a simple vowel, but of the diphthong ai, or, less equivocally ei.

i or ĩ, as the Italian short i, being somewhat longer than ours in “bit, pin, rib,” or as these words are pronounced in North Britain. It represents the supplementary vowel kesrah.

ō, as in “no, so, port, moment.” It represents و, and sometimes و preceded by ل, in Malayan words.

o or õ is a shorter pronunciation of the same vowel, but by no means that of our words “blot, song, moth,” where the o differs in nothing from the o in “what, squat, wan.” Its proper sound is more nearly that in “sobriety” (where it is shorter than in “sober”), in “molest,” or in the first syllable of “promotion.”

ū is to be sounded as in “rule, ruin, obtrude,” or with less risk of uncertainty, as the long u of the Italians and Germans, the oe of the Dutch, the ou of the French, and the English oo in the words “moon, fool, stoop.” It represents the و in its vowel capacity or quiescent, and is commutable for w at the commencement of a word or syllable, but never for و, as with the Persians. Above all it must not be confounded with the diphthongal sound of the English u in the words “mute, acute, puny.” It may be remarked that there is a tendency in the modern pronunciation of words in which this vowel occurs to assimilate it some degree to the Italian or pure u, as in “duke, due, duty” “allure, allude:” but it is difficult to write to the ear, and I am aware that the practice in this respect is not uniform.

u or ũ should be pronounced something less short than in “but, rub, sun,” or nearly as in “pull, full, cushion,” and approaching to the shorter sound of oo in “foot, stood,” which evidently differs from that in “fool, boot, stool.” It represents the supplementary vowel dammah.

au, for a sound nearly approaching to that of ou in the words “loud, pout, house,” is to be preferred, not only because the latter is liable to be confounded with the ou of the French (as well as of our words “could, should”) but also that the German pronunciation of the former diphthong, here adopted, is justified by the analysis of the component sounds, both on the principles of the European and Oriental alphabets. Indeed I have found by experience that when, for instance, the word ج jan barley, has been written jou, it was read as if written joo, and when written jow, it was read as jō, by analogy to our words “grow, mow.” It represents the au preceded by fat-hah. When preceded by !, the diphthong āu is substituted, the sound then approaching to the aou in the French words “saoul, raoul.”

ei is to be pronounced as the English long i in “pike, line, mine, nigh,” as the ie and ye in “die or dye, lie or lye,” the uy in “buy,” or the y in “my, cry.” This is warranted by the received mode of pronouncing those letters in Greek, as well as by the practice of most nations with whose language our own has the nearest affinity. It represents ي preceded by fat-hah. When that character is preceded by !, a more lengthened sound is expressed, which is here denoted by āi.

These are the only proper diphthongs found necessary to be employed. When such combinations occur as aw, uw, ia, iy, &c. they do not form a blended sound, but the letters belong respectively to distinct syllables, and are to be pronounced in succession.

OF CONSONANTS.

b is simply pronounced as in our words “bend, bib, babble, tub.” It represents ب.

c. The soft sound of this ambiguous letter before e and i being more conveniently represented by s, and its hard sound before a, o, u, by k, the use of it has been rejected, excepting in ch. This most useful combination bination is to be pronounced as in “chance, chest, torch, detached.” It is the Italian c before the two first-mentioned vowels, the German tsch, and the ج of the Malayan and Persian alphabets.

d is to be pronounced as in “did, wedded, added,” and stands for د f, as in “fifty, forfeit, offer,” when it occurs as the representative of ف, in words borrowed from the Arabic; but the Malays, who have not the sound in their own language, commonly substitute that of p, and pronounce pīkir for فیکر fīkir.

g is always hard, as in “game, gag, get, give, go, gun,” and never soft as in “gesture, giant, wage,” for which the j is uniformly employed. It is the representative of گ.

h, when it stands for the soft aspirate ه, may be pronounced as in “have, hold, high;” but in many Malayan, as well as in the English words “honour, honest, hour,” the aspiration is imperceptible. In such instances the words are generally written both with and without the h, as هوتن hutan and utan. At the end of words it only serves to give a fuller utterance to the preceding vowel. When employed to express the hard aspirate ح, it is not an uncommon practice to double the letter, and to write, for example, حح hhak, but I have not judged it necessary to depart so much from common orthography.

j consonant, a character whose power in the English alphabet is of great utility (as has been already observed) in expressing Oriental sounds, represents the letter ج, and is to be pronounced as in “jury, justice, jew,” also as dg in “judge, pledge, lodging,” and as g in “gem, gentry, sage.” Having in the northern languages of Europe the sound of our y, the Dutch mode of pronouncing words wherein the ج occurs is thereby considerably influenced, and the name of the island of JAVA or جاوا jāwa, as an instance, is by these people (to whom every Malayan scholar must look up with respect) pronounced as if written YAVA.

k has its uniform sound in “king, book, canker.” It is here made the

the representative both of ك (about which there will be no difference of opinion) and of ق, which some have denoted, on account of its hardness in the Arabic language by k, and others (particularly the French orientalisists) by q. In a choice of difficulties I have adopted the simplest mode, not only because the frequent recurrence of double k or of q not followed by u (unknown to our own orthography) is unpleasant to the eye, but because the Malays do not, in fact, make any distinction in the sound of the two letters:

l is sounded as in “land, loll, lily,” and represents the ل.

m, as in “man, maim, mummy,” representing the م.

n, as in “noun, on, linen,” representing the ن. The combined letters ng are to be sounded as in “sing, ringing, longing.” The circumflex is intended to shew that they are not to be pronounced separately as in our words “sin-ging, swin-ging, rin-gent,” but represent the single nasal ṅ, and occur as well at the beginning as in the middle or at the end of a word. In the latter case it has been judged unnecessary to retain the circumflex, as the pronunciation cannot be mistaken.

q it has not been found necessary to employ, its usual power in our orthography being as well, and more consistently, expressed by ku or kw. It may be observed that the names of many places in India are mispronounced by us, in consequence of the Portuguese (in whose writings they first became known) making use of qu to convey the sound of k; as in the name of Kedah, which being by them written Queda, is still, in the vulgar dialect of many of our countrymen, pronounced as if written kwéda. It is also desirable that the prevailing mode of pronouncing the name of the neighbouring island of Pinang, as if it were Péndang, with a strong accent on the latter syllable, should be corrected.

r to be sounded as in “run, river, burrow.” It represents the ر.

s, as in “sun, past, suspect, loose,” and not as in “has, was, lose,” where it has the sound of z. It represents the س. The combined letters sh,

sh, representing the ش, are sounded as in “shall, bush, wishes,” being the French ch, the German sch, the Dutch sj, and the Portuguese x, the word شاه shāh king, being in their histories always written xā.

t, as in “tame, tent, tatter,” and never sibilant as in “patience, nation.” It represents the ت, and as a final letter, the ã. The sound of th does not occur in this language.

v consonant does not occur in any Malayan word.

w is to be sounded as in “wall, west, reward.” It represents the , consonant and is employed only at the beginning of a syllable.

x is unnecessary, the sound it bears in the English language being no other than that of ks.

y is to be sounded as in “yam, yet, yore,” representing ي when employed as a consonant at the beginning of a syllable.

z, as in “zone, zeal, muzzle,” representing the ز, or as dz, the ذ.

It was my first intention to have prefixed the Malayan Grammar to this Dictionary, as forming a part of the same work, in which case any further exposition of the Alphabet would not have been required in this place; but in consequence of its being urged to me that however convenient such an arrangement might prove to the private student, it must be otherwise in places of public education, where their separate use (as in teaching Greek and Latin, Arabic and Persian) would be considered as indispensable, I have been induced to keep them distinct, and it therefore becomes eventually necessary to subjoin the figure, name, and power of the several letters composing the Malayan alphabet, referring to the Grammar for a more detailed explanation.

DICTIONARY, MALAYAN AND ENGLISH.

ā (long) and a (short). The first letter of the Arabic and Malayan alphabet, named ألف alif.

أب aba-aba tackle, gear, traces, harness (for draft cattle). Aba-aba lembu gear for oxen. Kenakan aba-aba ka-pada kandāran harness the draft cattle.

أبد abad, AR. an age; eternity.

إبراهيم ibrahīm, AR. the patriarch, or, according to the mahometans, prophet إبراهيم.

أبغ abang, JAV. red. (Vid. مير mērah.) Kāin abang red cloth. Bāwang abang the common red onion. Chingkarang abang a species of the erythrina with red blossoms.

أبغ abang the eldest brother or sister; ainé, FR. (Vid. كأكى kākak, and أديق adik.) Like most of the terms of relationship, it is employed as a familiar and friendly vocative. Adoh abang O my brother, or friend! Ka-māna garāng-an abang-ku pergi whither, I pray thee, is my brother (art thou) going? Mengapa ghāib-lah de mātā abang wherefore conceal yourself from the sight of your friends?

أبم abām fulcrum; bois d'appui, FR. Abām kamūdi the cross piece of timber which supports the rudder in Malayan vessels. Abām tiang the timber or thast which serves to steady the mast; the partners.

أبتار abantāra a herald. (Vid. بنتار bantāra.)

أبو abū ashes, dust. (Vid. هابو abū.)

أبي abai or abei to disregard, hold lightly. Ombak de abei-kan-nia they disregarded the surf.

أبي abeī-māna foramina corporis duo. Jekalau de per-ulih-nia kāin iang memadā-i menūtup ka-duā abei-māna maka de tutup-i-nia-lah akan ka-duā-nia atau de per-ulih-nia memadā-kan sāleh suātu deri-pada ka-duā-nia maka wājib men-daulūkan abei-māna iang de-adāp-an.

أتر and هاتر ātor order, form, array, rank.
